ARTHUR LINDORF POWER,

Norwell. Farmer, owner of the "Norwell Stock Farm" of 40 acres, purchased 1891. A two-story mansion with ell, containing 12 rooms, situated on a southern slope, contains swimming in some rooms, as inches wide and 12 feet long in single pieces. The old doors with wide panels and quiet latches, related in dining room. Fine old elm and ash trees ornament the grounds, dating back to 1805. Elm planted also by Rev. S. J. May. A spring on a side hill furnishes water, forced into a tall tower built of stones on high ground and forming one of the distinctive features. Products are chiefly milk and hay. Boston business men find this an ideal place to select stock all seasons of year. Part of farm originally occupied by Wm. Blackmore, killed by Indians April 29, 1846, while defending his family. Wife and children escaped to "Rock House" near by. See Deane's history of Seaboard, p. 125. Present owner built 1792 by Capt. Ephraim C. Pratt, subsequently placed known as Jonathan Stearns's place. Home of Rev. Saml. J. May of Amherst, Mass. and the home of Rev. Wm. H. Fish. Mr. Power was born in Boston Aug. 2, 1859. F. Nash, of 50, Schute.
